She ran into the kitchen and saw Burrell lying upon the floor. He exclaimed "I am shot." She asked him if Frank had shot him and he shook his head. She called William Dalk who was in the stable, and then ran to wake Mr. Minshall, the blacksmith. While running to the house she saw two men walking in a northeasterly diriction from her house and one carried gun. The men would run awhile and then walk. She did not see them after they were killed and could not have identified them as they were too far away from her when she saw them to note even their clothes, except that they were dark. A bullet was picked up in her house which was evidently shot from the station house.

When Mrs. Sears left the stand Mr. Sears, who was standing near County Attorney Balliet, saw for the first time a buckskin purse taken from one of the rob-bers and positively identified it as having belonged to Frank Jobst.

M. P. Minshali, the blacksmith who has figured in the proceedings, told an interest ing story. He was asleep in his room and was awakened by what he thought were shots, but not being certain dozed off again to be awakened by Mrs. Sears rapping at his window and crying: "For God's sake get up; someoody has killed Burrell and Frank." He dressed as hastily as possible and when he got ouiside Mrs. Sears point. and when he got outside Mrs. Sears pointed to two men walking away. They were some distance off. HAD A HAND IN IT.

Much credit is due the Montana Central company for the promptness with which the murderers were captured. An engine was got out of the round-house and attached to a car and pulled out for Silver, reaching there at 9 o'clock. All of this was done in the short time of forty minutes. Col. Shelby secured arms and men, and the whole affair was conducted with very little exhole one.

Colored Barber is Closed Out and Jump

Lafayette L. Grisson, a colored barber has skipped. Lafayette conducted a barber shop on Main street, under Billy Sims upon being informed in might be shot, was persuaded to stop, and willingly let the brakemen take her buggy to start in the class. Both men had rifles and jumped in the buggy, hastily driving off. 'But this is no way to chase murderers,' said Duffy, 'one of us had better get out and unhitch the horse and ride him.' Nothing would suit Duffy unless he was allowed the honor of riding the horse which was hurriedly unhitched and only the bridle left on him. Duffy got on the borse, which never until this time had a rider on his mount. The horse balked, reared and kicked, and in a very short time Duffy and his rifle were scattered all over the ground. This stook the enthusiasm out of the brakesman, and he gave up the pursuit."
